

Richard C. Russell-Photographer

Biography

Richard is a native of Hibbing, Minnesota. In 1962 he joined the U.S. Navy working as a Navy photo lab technician. This was followed by independent work in photographic labs in the Los Angeles area. His formal studies include a year at 'The Los Angeles Art Center' in the mid sixties. Informal studies include forty years of trial and error. In the past forty years his work has been shown in gallery venues, up and down the West Coast, from Los Angeles to Seattle.

He is currently a member of Photo Zone, which is a fine art photography co-op based in Eugene, Oregon. Through this affiliation a signature black and white shot entitled 'Railroad Tracks' was recently chosen for an upcoming movie poster, starring Robert Deniro & Sean Penn.

Artist Statement

My passion has always been the human condition. I like to think that I go where nobody else wants to go, can't go, will not go, or are afraid to go, and bring those realities to the people at large. Photography is the vehicle that I choose in my attempt to bring these images home. I basically consider myself a documentary & portrait photographer. I believe my camera is the best tool in the recording of time.
